SECTION 1 — 10 marks

Read the following information and attempt ALL the questions that follow.

Jamie works in a small firm, when she first started she was the only person providing administrative support to the owners. Jamie loved her job especially being in control of her day, making decisions and having an overview of all that was happening in the organisation. The job was challenging but Jamie felt that she was a key person in ensuring the success of the business.

As the business expanded Jamie was able to recruit additional administrative staff to help her offer support to the owners and managers. She had intended that the team would bring new skills and strengthen areas where she had gaps in her knowledge and abilities.

Within a few months Jamie was questioning her judgement with regards to who she had picked to work with her. She was aware of friction and bad feeling between some of the new staff and also felt that they were not as productive as expected. A number of deadlines had been missed and staff were blaming each other. This led to an increase in customer complaints which only Jamie had the experience to deal with. Following the complaints Jamie lost trust in some team members and spent a lot of time double-checking their work.

Jamie overheard one of the team commenting on the lack of leadership opportunities and that he had not had the chance to develop and learn new skills. Jamie was aware that some of the managers were by-passing her and giving work to some of the team. This caused her to feel some resentment as she wanted to maintain control over all the work undertaken by the administrative team.
